frying egg

6 August 20XX (Saturday)

This morning I had a horrifying kitchen experience. I woke up and got out of my bed. I was feeling quite hungry so I went downstairs to get breakfast. I went in the kitchen and thought for a while. I decided that I wanted to eat a sunny-side-up egg. I turned on the stove and grabbed the ingredients. I took out the frying pan from the cupboard and placed it on top of the stove. I cracked the egg open and started frying it with my spatula. ✓

While I was frying the egg, my mother called me. "Sam!" she shouted. I quickly put down my spatula and sprinted to the sitting room. "What's up?" I asked. Mum was sitting on the couch and she was struggling to switch between the TV channels. I walked towards her and helped her. ✓

I sat down on the couch and watched television with her. Suddenly, ~~there was some kind of~~ ^{the burning} smell from the kitchen. ^{was coming} The room was filled with smoke! My mum and I were both covering our nose. I rushed into the kitchen and realised I forgot to turn off the stove! When I was about to ~~run in~~, ^{make a dash for the kitchen} my mum stopped me. She ran into the kitchen and turned the stove off. ✓

(353) words

She threw the burnt egg into the trash bin and cleaned up the mess. I could tell that she was furious by the looks on her face. She was bristling with rage while she was cleaning up the mess. I hid behind the door anxiously. She walked out of the kitchen and exploded with rage like an erupting volcano. She started scolding me and shouted, 'What's wrong with you! It's very dangerous to leave the stove on! How could you forget about it?', There, ^{were} tears dropping down from my face. I stuttered while apologising, 'I'm sorry. I... I shouldn't ^{have} forgotten about it.' She hugged me and said, 'You could have gotten hurt!'. Both of us hugged each other. I've learnt an important lesson today. I should never ^{tightly} ~~leave~~ the stove on at all cost. I'll never do it again! ^{while going cooking} ~~so~~ ~~here~~ ~~else~~ ✓
